

Dear IWAENC 2010 participants,

Tel-Aviv-Jaffa is famous for its abundance of restaurants, cafés, and food stalls. The city offers a variety of cuisines, ranging from street falafel stalls to Haute Cuisine. Rich and diverse culinary heritages are merged into the new Israeli cuisine, which is based on the rich variety of locally-grown fresh vegetables and fruits.

All of us will be very busy hearing lectures during daytime, but I'm sure that we would all like to relax with good food and a drink in the evening.

In the following table and map I try to list some of the eating places I like in Tel-Aviv-Jaffa. I have tried all of them and therefore all these recommendations are based on my personal taste. I try to put a representative choice of cuisines in a wide range of prices. The restaurants are located all over the city. So, you can have a stroll in any of the tourist attractions the city has to offer and always end up in a nice place to eat.

It is rather difficult to categorize most the restaurants. For example, a bistro may serve Moroccan-style tajin dishes along with classical confit de canard. A café is a place to have a good slice of cake with an excellent cup of coffee at any hour, but also a full meal.

Cafes are usually open from morning to midnight. Restaurants are usually open for lunch and dinner. The more casual restaurants may be open all day long and welcome guests even after midnight.

Most restaurants and shops in Israel accept credit cards, but to be on the safe side, please ask in advance. Tipping is usually not included in your bill. It is customary to leave 10% in cash. In the more fancy restaurants, a higher tip is expected, but it usually can be paid also with your credit card.

The list is of course incomplete. If you have any question or if you are looking for something else, just let me know.

Google Map:

I used the following color code:

Magenta: Gourmet, expensive

Blue: Medium price

Green: Cheap

In red you'll find two anchors to help your orientation: the Sheraton Hotel (workshop venue) and the Clock Tower in Jaffa.

Enjoy!
