

Prof. Ziv Ben Ari

Prof. Ziv Ben Ari is a graduate of the Faculty of Medicine, Technion, Haifa, Israel. Prof. Ben Ari was trained between-1991-1996 for liver medicine at the Royal Free Hospital in London. In 1996, Prof. Ben Ari joined the Liver Institute at the Rabin Medical Center and in 2012 she established the first Liver Disease Center and the Laboratory for liver molecular biology in the Sheba Medical Center. She was a visiting Professor of Medicine and Hepatology at the UCSF Medical Center, San Francisco. Between 2010-2013 she served as the chairwoman of Israeli Association for the Study of Liver Disease and in 2012 she was appointed to chair the liver committee at the national Israeli council for Gastroenterology, Nutrition and liver Disease. Her main research interests include hepatitis C, fatty liver and hepatocellular carcinoma. Prof. Ben Ari is a Professor of Medicine at the Tel Aviv University and the Sackler School of Medicine where she teaches and trains medical students. Prof. Ben Ari actively participates and presents in numerous national and international meetings. She is also a member of several professional societies. Prof. Ben Ari is Associate Editor of several leading journals and a member of the Editorial Boards in several Hepatology journals. Prof. Ben Ari is the recipient of several national awards in Israel. She is the author of over 160 publications including original reports, editorials, reviews, and chapters in books.